Notes of Tulsa's Legion

J. C. Chatfield resigns as assistant state adjutant of the American Legion to return to his home in Tulsa and become manager of the National Petroleum News. He has managed headquarters since 1919 and will be succeeded by C. H. Jones, of Oklahoma, a member of the Tulsa post.

Oklahoma is to have a statewide census of ex-service men. This census is to be conducted by the legion and its aim will be the determination of the needs of every veteran man in the state. The census will seek but every man who has served in the war, ascertain whether or not he needs hospital treatment, compensation or vocational training, and certain provisions of the state hospital compensation bill making which of the five features the man will take advantage of when the bill is passed. To perfect plans for this census, county executive meetings of the American Legion have been called for February 12, according to a letter being sent out to all county and post commanders by H. H. Davis of Duncan, state commander.

Legionnaires are to have a summer recreation center. Those good old days, more or less, will be recalled by the fact that this center will take for, according to the plans of Lowery Post 29 of Lawton, a French village is to be reproduced at Medicine Park for the use of ex-service men. The Lawton post expects to build the "Hotel de Ville," with an auditorium capable of seating 1,000 persons. It will provide free ground and superintend the construction of cottages that may be built by post throughout the state. Land on which the village may be constructed as well as the native stone will be donated. Electric lights and water will be furnished free. J. Ronda Stephens, commander of the Lawton post, states that all the expenses will be for labor, doors and windows and cement.

The newest local unit in the state to make application for a charter is Braman post number 259. The post was organized by Nell Richardson of Blackwell last week. W. L. Rosenberg was selected as commander and T. H. Lambkin as adjutant of the post.

One of the forward looking plans of the legion is that of Rhodes-Pritchett post number 16, Jack Paden, post adjutant, discloses the fact that this post has evolved the idea of a summer encampment of the American Legion on the banks of the Illinois river. Detailed reports of the plan are being sent to all posts in the state. An orchestra that is essentially a legion organization and that would be available for all musical needs of the post may be the outgrowth of the summer of last Wednesday night. About eight legionnaires pooled their musical talents, so to speak, and formed an impromptu orchestra for the Wednesday night legion dance. That their individual abilities had never had the benefit of even as much as one rehearsal no one knew, and the debut of what may be the first legion orchestra organization was very much a triumph.

Four years behind in his reading, Harry Huesteden, German farmer of Muskogee, L. I., has just run into the battle of Chateau Thierry, and has how so excited he can't work. In the summer Huesteden raised berries in the winter he sits and listens to his wife read world events from a chronological collection of German newspapers. She reads slowly, and Huesteden, who is unable to read himself, with stolid devotion thoroughness has never allowed her to skip.

"Didn't you know that this country was in the war?" a member of the American Legion asked him. "Ja," said Huesteden, "but I wasn't interested because I hadn't got to it yet in the papers."

"It's all over now," said the legionnaire heartily.

"Ach, not for me!" replied Huesteden, returning to his wife and the pile of papers.

One of the features of the conference of the national executive committee of the American Legion Weekly was the initiation of 100 candidates into the mysteries of the Society des 40 Hommes et 8 Chevaux. Among these candidates were Henry D. Lindsley, first national commander; Charles Kendrick of California, national vice-commander; Gen. Wilder R. Metcalf, commander of the Kansas department and John G. Emery, past national commander.

The list of states that pay adjusted compensation to their ex-service men now includes Minnesota, Maine, Michigan, Massachusetts, Missouri, New Jersey, New Hampshire, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Vermont, Wisconsin and Washington, according to John Thomas Taylor, vice chairman of the American Legion's legislative committee.
